A Fornander, n consideration for his book, having considered the matter beg to report as follows: The work of which Mr. Fornander is the author, and which he has published, to wit, "The Polynesian Race," is a work to which he has devoted many years of careful study and research, and which has been highly commended by competent critics a: home and abroad. It is the most learned work ever written here and is a credit to the author, to his adopted country and to the Hawaiian people. Being a philosophical and scientific work, and not what is usually called a popular book, it will be purchased by comparatively few people, so that it cannot be pecuniarily profitable to the author, but has cost more than he will receive from sales for many years to come. For the reasons above stated, the committee recommend to the Assembly to apder towards expenses for his book.

These extravagant appropriations would hurt the Government. A $1,000,000 loan would more than cover all the items in the bill, and those old bonds running at nine per cent should be taken up. The Japanese and the Savings Bank funds will be large. As there would be no gain in picking up the six per cent bonds outside, he was in favor of $1,000,000. Mr. Thurston said he had been patiently waiting to hear what the Ministers were going to do.

His Excellency Mr. Gibson said although authority might be asked for the Government to raise $2,000,000 by way of loan, yet it was quite probable that for six On motion of Mr. Kean the committee | months they would not want more than $300,000 or $400,000. Neither he or his colleagues, or indeed any Government would ever think of raising money when it was not needed and paying interest on it. But when the Legislature sanctioned expenditure for certain works the Government should be in a position to raise the amount terest of course would only be payable upon the loan as it was raised, and the money would not be borrowed unless it was actually required for works under authorization by the Legislature. Therefore the argument that an authorization for a $2,000,000 loan should not be passed because the Government might be paying interest upon money which could not be used, was without any force; in other words, although the Government had an authorization to borrow $2,000,000 is could only be raised in sums as required to carry out the specific appropriations by the Legislature. The motions to pass the amount at $1,-000,000 and $500,000 were put and both lost. The section passed as amended, and
